Sexual harassment in schools is a common occurrence. Sexual harassment can be done by anyone from teachers to students themselves. Oftentimes, teenagers still don’t know the boundaries between the opposite sex, so they just let sexual harassment act because of a lack of education. And many victims do not dare to report because they are still traumatized or afraid of being blamed for telling stories and reporting. Illustrated books can be used as a medium because illustrated books have visuals that attract teenagers who are very visually sensitive. The research was conducted through interviews with activists and junior high school students as well as conducting questionnaires to junior high school students regarding their preferred style of illustration.
