Stress can attack everyone without knowing their age. Then it's no wonder that now many teenagers are stressed out. When stress becomes overrated, or chronic, it can ruin welfare and mental health. The goal of this test is to research mental pressure diseases that occur due to lack of appreciating the family environment. This test to gain the perception of teenage children and parents about the importance of appreciating opinions to avoid the occurrence of mental pressure disease on teenagers. By using interactive comic methods, the specific objective of this research is to: give a specific study of mental pressure due to the pressure of the family; making a media that eases the explanation of mental pressure that occurs in the neighborhood; and determine interactive comic which is suited to ease the reading of books. Questioner survey is done on teenagers and parents.
