The Kanjuruhan tragedy that left 153 people dead became the second deadliest football event in the world. In addition to national media, international online media also highlighted and reported this case. Based on the phenomenon, researchers want to see the objectivity of the news of the Kanjuruhan tragedy which has a high level of sensitivity, from national and international media that have a good reputation in their respective countries. The paradigm used constructivism with qualitative research types. This research method is qualitative content analysis, with the concept of objectivity of Rahma Ida. The results showed, the measure of accuracy, all five media have met. Then impartiality, Tribunnews, Kompas.com, and The Guardian almost complied. Validity, Kompas.com and The Guardian are both almost complete media. The focus of the five media reports is the chronology of the Kanjuruhan tragedy to the legal verdict.
